Count the Kicks

Count the Kicks is a community-driven project where individuals and organizations join forces to encourage women and girls to count their kicks. Counting the number of kicks a woman experiences during pregnancy can be an important indicator of fetal health. The project aims to raise awareness and engagement around this preventive measure.

The project has reached over 24,000 women in 167 countries, collecting data from over 6,000 women. This data has shown that over 26% of pregnancies are at risk. Count the Kicks has received support from organizations such as UNICEF, WHO, and the Ford Foundation.

Count the Kicks is available on both Google Play and iTunes. It is also found on www.countthekicks.org.
